This locking system is used in both our residential and French Door suites. The French Door system allows for independent locking systems to be used on either door. The master door is locked into position with the slave door (the secondary opener), via a floating mullion (this is an additional part of the door that houses the keeps on the slave door).

As can be seen below, our French Door setup (left) gives a more balanced look to the door and also provides easier opening of the slave door via the handle and cylinder lock. Many other French Door systems (like the one on the right) have a single handle and require operation of fiddly finger bolts and release mechanisms to open the slave door.
